What does this mean?

At Peachy, we're not just passionate about serving flavors of the Middle East or crafting seasonal menus around the farm-to-plate philosophy. We are also committed to making a positive impact on our planet.

As an ecologically aware organisation, we've taken significant steps towards sustainability. We have completely phased out single-use plastics from our operations and replaced them with environmentally conscious alternatives.

From our friends at SKUTE and NIU - Leave no trace on your favourite island. No CO2, no noise, no air pollution. The time for green mobility is now!

We love Bali, and we want it to be here for a long time. Being conscious of our environment is important to us, so we ride electric bikes. If you do too, we have an electric bike charging station in our carpark ready for you to top up while you wine and dine upstairs.

We use reusable cloth napkins and coasters, recycle old wine bottles to derive our free table water and try our best to care for our environment.

Every decision we make, every product we use, runs through our ecological filter. It's our way of ensuring that we're doing all we can to protect and preserve the land of the Gods.

When you dine with us, you'll not only experience our range of Middle Eastern flavors, but you'll also be supporting our dedication to sustainability.

Our menu features the highest quality produce, seafood, meat, and poultry, sourced from local suppliers who share our commitment to sustainable practices.

Join us at Peachy, where fine cuisine meets environmental responsibility.
